PREFACE

This, the third history and geneology of the Albrecht family, is somewhat more complete as to early history than the second printed about 100 years after the first families came to America. We have tried to relate tales of the hardships encountered and the fortitude with which the early pioneers met them.

As we search into the past and follow this one family, who left the oppression of the old world and reached for a fuller life for their families in a marvelous new country, we behold the growth of a mighty nation.

The incidents related were told to the grandchildren, by those who lived them, as they sat around the old heating stove, in the light of tallow candles and later the oil lamp. Early dates were taken from the naturalization papers and Bibles. And now as we pass them on to you in the age of electricity, motor cars and air travel, we have given a glimpse of a people, honest, thrifty and industrious, but firm in their personal convictions of right toward their fellow men.

OUR HONORED DEAD

Lieutenant Jerome James Zierlein

Lt. Jerome James Zierlein, flying son of Mr. and Mrs. Roscoe R. Zierlein, Sr., was shot down and killed 15 miles south of Beouvais, France, near Paris, on August 25, 1944, during World War II. He was a member of the 474th Fighter group of the Army's Ninth Air Force. He had completed 33 missions between March and July, 1944, and had participated in D-day maneuvers. His family received an air medal with an oak leaf cluster to which Lt. Zierlein had been entitled to wear when shot down. His body was buried in a military cemetery at Solars, France, and later brought to a cemetery in Baytown, Texas, home of his parents.

2nd Lieutenant John H. Albrecht

2nd Lt. John H. Albrecht, great grandson of Jacob, and son of Mr. & Mrs. Henry Albrecht, was killed Oct. 13, 1943, at Corpus Christi Naval Air Base, Texas. He was giving a cadet final instructions on a windy day, the day before the cadet was to make his solo flight.

Many other Albrechts served their country honorably and well in various capacities, but, as far as we know, did not make the supreme sacrifice.

HISTORY OF THE FAMILY OF

Christian Albrecht (1777-1842) and wife Elizabeth Engel Albrecht (1780-1841)

Early in the nineteenth century, Christian Albrecht with his wife, Elizabeth Engel Albrecht lived in a large community house at Kaiserslautern, Bavaria, Germany, which became a city of some 50,000 inhabitants. They also lived at some time in Budenhof, Bavaria, and in the Grand Duchy of Baden for these were the birthplaces of some of their children. They were members of the Mennonite Church, and farmers by trade, living in villages or on large estates and going out to work on the surrounding farms, as is the custom in Germany to this day.

To them were born nine children. One of the sons said to an inquirer, "We are five brothers and each of us has four sisters", to which came the reply, "What a large family!" The son smiled, for each brother had the same four sisters. As the children grew up and the sons, one after the other, became old enough for compulsory military training, their problems began, for the militaristic government would not respect their religious convictions that it was wrong for a Christian to take up arms against his fellow man. However, the oldest son, Jacob, was excused from service because his help was needed to provide for so large a family. Five years later when Peter's turn came, the officer found him sitting at the roadside playing with pebbles as though he were mentally deficient and thus granted his exemption. When the third son John's turn came, the father was told he could not expect all his sons to go free and that John must go into the standing army.

Consequently, Christian Albrecht and wife decided to make plans immediately to migrate to America with their entire family, to the land of religious freedom and opportunity, rather than to stay and live contrary to the teaching of the Church. The father said he was not going for his own benefit but in the interest of his children. This was a large undertaking and took faith and courage, for by this time one son and three daughters were already married and there were seven grandchildren, thus requiring passage for 23 persons in all. All necessary arrangements were made and on about the 20th of April 1836, a few days after John was inducted into the army, they set sail from the Port of Bremen and landed at New York on about the 1st of July. On the voyage, John, the infant son of the oldest daughter, Barbara, and her husband, Joseph Ioder, learned to take his first steps alone, and was the pastime of the passengers until he became very ill, having a very high fever. After his recovery he was never the same, though in due time he grew in body, he remained mentally a dependent child until his death at the age of 26 years.

Having friends who had come to America several years before, and who were living in Illinois in the Hennepin community, near the Illinois river, they decided to make this their destination. They went by the way of the water route, going up the Hudson river, through the Erie Canal, into the Great Lakes and on to Fort Dearborn, which has since become the great city of Chicago. From there on the only means of transportation was by ox team and wagon, which they hired to haul their trunks and other possessions, while the father, mother, children and grandchildren walked. The entire inland trip from New York to Hennepin is said to have taken a little over three weeks.

Upon their arrival at Hennepin they were welcomed by the Burkeys and taken into their home in true pioneer fashion until other arrangements could be made. During this first summer, Casper Zierlein, the husband of the daughter, Elizabeth, helped toward the building of the new Hennepin Court House, which was made of brick and is still being used, though it has since been enlarged. His knowledge of brick-making stood him in good stead.

In the fall of the same year, the son Joseph, about 19 years old, crossed to the west side of the Illinois River in search of a suitable site for establishing a home. In the meantime, heavy fall rains fell causing the waters to rise so high in the lowlands that it was about six weeks before he could return home. He made himself a brush shelter between two trees and his food consisted of wild berries and nuts and such game as he could capture and cook upon a camp fire.

After his return he persuaded his parents, his sister, Barbara, husband, Joseph Ioder and four children; Jacob, wife and two children; and Elizabeth, husband, Casper Zierlein, and two children, to cross over with him. Together they settled in Sec. 21 of Arispie Twp. (a short distance north of where the Benson School house was built) and built a one-room log house which had only a fireplace for cooking and heating. This was the home for the first winter for the four families consisting of 17 people. On November 17, 1837, Christian Albrecht purchased this land from the government. The mother, Elizabeth Engel Albrecht, was a tall slender woman, whose days were filled with concern for her family. She contracted pneumonia and passed away in December, 1841. The father also became ill with pneumonia a few weeks later and died in January, 1842. They were buried in a family cemetery on the home farm where later more of the family and neighbors also were buried.

In the summer following the first winter, Barbara and husband built a cabin about one and a half miles north of her parents on what was later known as the Tebow farm, and still later as the Obermeyer place. Later they moved about one and three-quarter miles south of her folks onto what is known as the Kentville road. Casper Zierlein made the brick and built the brick house in which they lived until the close of their lives. Bricks were made in a field south of the Ioder home near a large oak. The farm is still in the possession of the Ioder descendants. Five sons and three daughters were born to this family. The father, Joseph Ioder, was struck and killed by a train at the crossing about a mile east of Tiskilwa in 1857. This was the first railroad accident in the community. The railroad had been completed only about five years.

Their unfortunate son, John Ioder, once went out into the nearby woods and became lost. Neighbors searched several days until he was found; during this time his only food was wild berries. The mother's concern was continually about what would become of John after she was gone, but she was privileged to outlive him.

At the same time that Christian Albrecht purchased his farm, (Nov. 17, 1837), the son, Jacob, also purchased the 80 acres two miles west of his parents just above the Plow Hollow hill. Here he built a home for his family. Later he moved four miles north and west of Princeton beyond the covered bridge. At this place he built what at that time was considered a very large bank barn. The timbers in the building were hand hewn from the trees in the nearby woods. Jacob was a strong, active man. One day as he and his sons were busily at work, one of the horses of the team tied to a tree became entangled in the harness and was strangling. In hurrying to the rescue, he ran across a well and slipped in but was out and up to the horse ahead of the sons. An onlooker remarked about the speedy escape from the well to which Jacob laughingly replied, "I haven't time to die, I have a barn to build." This barn is still standing, sturdy and straight. During World War I the government would have bought the barn for the sake of the many walnut timbers for making gunstocks, but it was not for sale.

At this place he lost his first wife. He then married Barbara Rinkenberger and seven children were born — two of whom died there.

In 1864 he rode a horse to Missouri to contact a Mr. Elston who owned 856 acres of land which Jacob Albrecht wished to buy. He did buy it and soon moved to a small house which stood a quarter of a mile west of intersection Rte 92 and 26. The house has been moved and rebuilt, but still stands. They had not lived there long before his second wife died — she being the second to be buried in Red Oak Cemetery.

The ground on which the Ohio schools stand was donated by Jacob Albrecht to be used for a school site only, and if it was ever abandoned, this block should revert to his heirs. Because of this provision the new building was erected on the same site although some wished to build in the outskirts of the village where there would have been room for a play yard.

When the railroad was built thro this section, Jacob contracted to build part of the grade. He wanted the station called "Albrecht", which it was called for some time, but since many of the settlers were from Ohio State, Albrecht Village was later changed to Ohio Station, and was finally shortened to "Ohio".

This 856 acre tract included where Ohio stands and as far as and including the Dad Joe farm. He gave tracts of it to each of the five younger children. Jacob's eldest son, John, bought a home in Livingston County, and raised a large family. John's son, William, a Ph. D., has been at the head of the soil department of the University of Missouri for a number of years.

At the time of Jacob's death he had acquired holdings of 1000 acres of farm land in Bureau County. He is buried in Oakland Cemetery in Princeton.

That first spring in America, Elizabeth, wife of Casper Zierlein, decided she, too, would try to help provide for her family by making a dugout on the eastern part of the same section as her parts. It was never completed as they decided to locate several miles southwest on what became known as the old Zierlein place, which is now owned by Oliver Leutscher. Her husband built a log cabin there, and later a frame house. Early in the 1850's he made brick and built a nice brick house instead. Though unoccupied for many years, it was still standing until taken down a few years ago. Elizabeth lived fourteen years after her husband passed away and made her home with her various children.

Peter Albrecht remained in Putnam County many years. He was still living there when he applied for naturalization on April 29, 1853. It was this paper which gave us the information that he was born in the Grand Duchy of Baden and that he migrated from the Port of Bremen on or about April 20, 1836 and arrived at New York on or about July 1. To obtain citizenship, he renounced his allegiance to the Duke of Bavaria.

Peter was married to Catherine Burkey and to this union were born three sons and four daughters. Three children died in early childhood. However, the son, Joseph J. lived to be a few weeks less than 94 years old, which was older than any of the other grandsons of Christian Albrecht.

On Sept. 22, 1865, Peter acquired land on what was then called Providence Prairie, near the village of Lombardville. Here he and his wife resided until death. This property is in the possession of his grandson, John Eigsti.

One day he made a trip to the mill and it was late in the night before he could get home. Finding the door bolted, he went to the bedroom window and tapped lightly to see if his wife was awake. Receiving no reply, he went to another window of the house and climbed quietly in so as not to disturb her. However, she had heard the tapping and heard him climb in, but made no reply because she feared it was a robber. She did not know until morning that it was her own husband. Such were some of the experiences of pioneer life.

John, the third son, was born in Budenhof, Bavaria, Germany (April 3, 1814). He attended common school carrying a piece of dry rye bread in his pocket for lunch, as the others also had probably done. After he grew up, he was not able to obtain military exemption as his brothers before him. At the time his parents departed for America he was compelled to report for military duty. Lonely and troubled, his strength failed him until he was scarcely able to perform his required duties. Finally this thought came to him, "Oh, why are you so foolish to grieve so, put your trust in God; He forsakes no one." With renewed faith came new strength and courage. The usual term of service was three years, but because of threat of war with France, it was extended at this time to six years. On April 16, 1842, he received honorable discharge with commendation for good conduct. He immediately prepared to come to America, borrowing money from friends for his passage. Before he could get away he received a letter from America with the sad news that both his father and mother had died during the winter. The trip made across the ocean in a sailboat took 54 days. From New York he went west by train, then by water to St. Louis. His funds having been exhausted, a fellow passenger loaned him $20.00 to complete the trip. Inquiring for a boat to Hennepin he was told that while the town might be called Hennepin in German, it was pronounced "Hannibal" in English, and directed him to a boat that took him to Hannibal, Missouri, so he was obliged to return to St. Louis. Again he was without funds, but finding a grain boat about to leave for Hennepin, he arranged to work for his passage. It was harvest time when he arrived, and coming to his brother's home unexpected and unannounced, he was taken for a laborer looking for work. However, as soon as he spoke, his brother recognized him and fell upon his neck with joy.

His first employer was Mr. Alvin Perkins near the village of Senachwine, (now Putnam). His first wages were $9.00 per month, but were soon raised to $11.00. He worked until he had earned enough to pay off his debts. At the age of thirty he was married in Tazewell County to Miss Mary Ackermann, who had also been a native of Bavaria.

After farming for two years on a rented place near his brother Jacob at Princeton, he bought 80 acres southeast of Tiskilwa at $5.50 per acre. (A great grandson, Robert Albrecht, now lives on this farm.) In the middle of winter when his son Christian was but six weeks old they moved onto the place into a three-room house which was not yet plastered. In severe weather they hung quilts around the walls to keep more comfortable. The horses were taken to a nearby hollow and tied to the wagon under a rude shelter of brush. The water supply was taken from a nearby spring. His wife helped replenish the meat supply by shooting prairie chickens which often came near the house.

This home was blessed by five sons and three daughters. One little son met an accidental death by scalding. Little Peter and Magdalene, one of the twin girls, died just a day apart of scarlet fever. The wife and mother died in January, 1875 at the age of 56, and was the second to be buried in the Willow Springs cemetery. Several years later, the son, Christian, married and with his wife kept the home for the father until he quietly fell asleep at the age of 91 years and 6 months, and was buried beside his wife. Until his eyesight failed, he spent many hours reading his New Testament. His seat at church was seldom vacant as long as strength permitted. He extended a helping-hand to many a struggling fellow man and won for himself the affectionate title of "Uncle Johnny".

KATHERINE ALBRECHT—SIXTH CHILD

Katherine Albrecht was married to a Heimer in Germany. One son, John, was born before they came to America with her parents. She and her husband moved to Woodford County. Mr. Heimer died in Spring Bay. Later she was married to Daniel Orendorff. They lived in Livingston County near where the town of Flanagan now stands. At that time the land was not yet drained and there were swampy places. Because of this in early years it was considered an unhealthy place as the people were subject to chills and fever (malaria). Seven children came to bless the Orendorff home and grew up in the Flanagan community where Katherine and her husband lived until their death. Her oldest son, John Heimer, married Mary Weidrich and in 1871, moved to Melvern, Kansas, where he resided the rest of his life.

Joseph was married to Barbara Gingery, who had come from Germany to Pennsylvania in 1825, and later to Illinois. He brought his bride to the home of his parents and they remained together as long as the parents lived. The old homestead became the property of Joseph; it is now owned by Albert Schertz. The original cabin stood for many years after a new house had been built. His oldest son, Joseph W., married and served his community as a veterinary. Daniel and his wife remained on the homestead and with the assistance of his sister, Katherine, cared for the aged parents as long as they lived. Joseph's youngest son, William, was the first American Albrecht to obtain a college degree. He graduated from Lombard University, Galesburg, Illinois, June 15, 1874, then went to Germany for a year of special work, after which he studied in Brooklyn and graduated from a medical course. However, his career was brought to an early end by death.

MAGDALENE ALBRECHT BURKEY—EIGHTH CHILD

Magdalene ALBRECHT Burkey (b. Jun. 17, 1819—d. Apr. 10, 1866) was born in Bavaria, Germany. She was one of the group of 23 persons that Magdalene's father, (Christian ALBRECHT) and mother (Elizabeth Engel Albrecht) brought with them to America in 1837. Shortly after arriving in America, at about the age of 19 years, she was married to Andrew Burkey (b. 1802—d. Mar. 4, 1886), and subsequently ten children were born to them: namely, Fannie, Valentine, Andrew, John, Joseph, Lena, and four others who died in infancy. The Albrechts lived with the Burkey's the first winter.

Magdalene's husband, Andrew Burkey, was a farmer. They first resided in Putnam County, then later moved northwest of Ohio to a farm where Marvin Ioder now lives at the time of this writing in 1952. After some years they moved to Crete, Nebraska, with their two youngest children, Joseph and Lena. Two years later they bought and moved to a 120-acre farm on the West Blue River. Their youngest child, Lena, (Mrs. George Poole), now 97 years old, lives in Milford, Nebraska and is the oldest living descendant of Christian Albrecht.

Valentine Burkey's son, 85-year old Daniel E. Burkey, now living in Nampa, Idaho, wrote in 1950 of incidents during his pioneer days: "The summer of 1878 found us quite prosperous and hopeful. The corn was near roasting-ear time, and a good big garden was coming along fine, and most important of all, the watermelons were nearly ready to pluck. After dinner, one fine day, we saw along the western horizon what looked like a heavy thunder storm coming. Monstrous black clouds, yet no thunder or no lightning. Soon, to our dismay, we found the storm to be GRASSHOPPERS, a cloud of them so thick that the sun couldn't shine through. They came down in swarms, two inches thick on the ground, creeping, crawling, jumping. With doors and windows shut, we could do nothing but shiver and pray. Our neighbor warned us that if they stayed three days they would eat everything that was green. Early the next morning the wind rose from the west and the grasshoppers rose with the wind in great clouds, just as they had come. Where they had come from and where they went, nobody ever knew. Then the next spring we were harassed by a great dust storm which lasted nearly a week. Dust drifted three and four feet high along the hedge fences, much like drifting snow. Nobody could work in the field and we couldn't see the sun during those days."

CHRISTIAN ALBRECHT, Jr.—NINTH CHILD

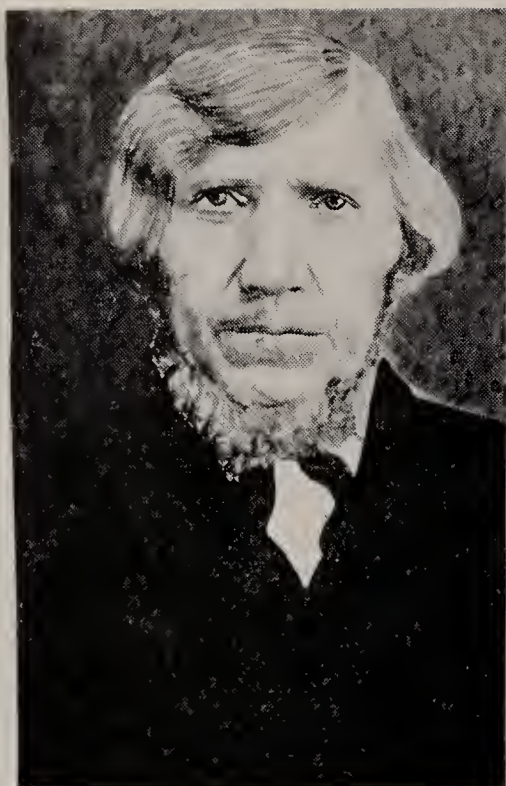

Christian, Jr., the ninth and youngest child of Christian and Elizabeth Albrecht, remained at Hennepin until after his marriage to Katherine Roggy; they then moved to Arispie township into a log cabin just below the hill on which his parents and brother Joseph were living. A few years later came the "California Gold Rush" in 1849. Some of the younger men of Christian's acquaintance decided to go in search of gold and induced him to go along. During his absence, his family remained with her folks at Hennepin. The trek across the plains was very tedious, being made with a team of horses and wagon. When they came to the desert, the horses became sick and had to be left, so they went the rest of the way on foot. They came to the gold field in due time and made their home at Sutter's Fort. They stayed on the field about one year, and were successful in finding some gold. However, living expenses were very high, and having no way of overland transportation, they came home by water around South America, so by the time they reached home not much gold was left.

In June, 1863, he purchased some land on the Providence Prairie near Lombardville, and lived there with his family many years. This farm is now the home of his grandson, Herman Rinkenberger. He and his wife with their daughter, Elizabeth, spent the latter years of their lives in Tiskilwa. They lie buried side by side in the Willow Springs Cemetery.

Their son, John, used to tell of accompanying his father on a certain trip to a mill. As they were passing an Indian village, an Indian climbed onto the wagon giving the boy a terrible fright. Since they could not speak one another's language, they did not know that he simply wanted a ride, but when they passed where he wanted to go, to John's great relief, he jumped off and went his way.
